ARTISANAL COOL

Since 2008, designer Joe Lucas's Los Angeles shop, Harbinger, has been a go-to source for curated goods. A recent expansion has broadened the appeal. Harbinger by Hand, Lucas's showroom within a showroom, emphasizes exquisite craftsmanship with three standout lines: Merida rugs, Fromental wallpaper, and Lance Wovens leathers. It's a hotbed of style for the handmade. 752 N. La Cienega Blvd.; harbingerla.com.

SIMPLY STATED Jim Thompson's recent purchase of the British fabric firm Fox Linton means the extraordinarily plush textiles that designers in the know have long sworn by are now available on this side of the pond. Mostly a collection of solids, the luxe line forgoes pattern in favor of sumptuous weights and textures: thick, tactile linens, mink-soft mohairs, rich velvets you can sink into. To the trade; jimthompson.com.

BORDER TRILOGY

With even the smallest measuring more than six inches wide, the gorgeously patterned tapes by Namay Samay feature painstakingly embroidered patterns inspired by Indian motifs and a sit-up-and-take-notice scale. In sophisticated color combinations that modernize their ethnic influences, the embellishments would make ideal finishing touches as borders on Roman shades or curtains. From $261 a yard; through tissusdhelene.co.uk.

FULL BLOOM

Enfleur, the latest bedding from Yves Delorme, stars a soft floral that takes its cue from watercolors, with brushstroke blossoms and tropical hues that will warm a room even in the dead of winter. From $120; yvesdelorme.com.
